

A SCIENCE THRILLER · ISSUE 01 · CHAPTER 1

SYMBIONT

Fifteen years ago, I started writing a story about a man who builds a frequency that quiets the noise inside the human mind.

Today, it's a book you can hold.

FROM CHAPTER 1 — FORTY-ONE

"For fifteen years, the human mind had sounded to Dr. James Hale like a radio trapped between stations — a crackling, exhausting hiss of neurological noise that crippled thought and eroded empathy. He had spent his entire adult life building the one frequency that could clear it."

"James Hale typed the command at 11:47 p.m. and watched fifteen years of his life try, one more time, to come true..."

A GIFT FOR READERS

A crossword built from Chapter 1

Twenty words from the opening chapter — neuroscience, the device, and the people James can't stop building it for. Print it, solve it, pin it to the fridge. Answer key on page two — but don't peek until you've earned it.

WHAT'S NEXT

Book 2 is already in progress. If the trilogy finds its readers, the third is waiting. Stay on this list and you'll be the first to know.

If SYMBIONT lands for you — leave a quick review on Amazon. For a debut author, those first few reviews are the difference between a book that disappears and one that travels. I read every one.
